President Berkman's presentation, Higher Education: Affordability, Attainment and Return on Investment, opened the discussion (Attachment L). He noted that the unemployment rate for 25-to-34-year-olds who graduated from a four-year college is 2.4% nationally, and that the State of Ohio has set the goal of increasing higher educational attainment by 22 percentage points. He noted that Ohio is currently not keeping pace with the nation: Ohio ranks sixth out of seven Midwestern states in the category of associate's degree attainment and higher for adults ages 25-64; fifth out of those same seven states in the category associate's degree attainment and higher for adults ages 25-34; and Ohio ranks the bottom third of all states (36th) in the total attainment category. In total attainment, Ohio is ranked the bottom compared to Midwestern peers: Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, New York and Pennsylvania. Additionally, there is an attainment gap for bachelor's degrees by family income.

President Berkman further noted that current efforts have not yet had their desired impact; he noted that despite significant state and local efforts to increase college enrollment, the number of college-going Ohioans actually declined by 1% in 2015. Ohio expects a decline in the number of high school graduates from 2020 to 2028 (7%), which will result in a smaller pool for college enrollment.

Dr. Berkman then presented information about the issue of affordability and declining financial aid in Ohio, in comparison to other Midwestern peer states and New York. He noted that Ohio ranks 12th highest in the nation for student loan rates (67%), and Ohioans who borrow graduate with the 1st largest debt load ($29,353).

Dr. Berkman noted that Cleveland State is among the top three four-year public universities in Ohio for "value added" boosts in mid-career earnings, occupational earnings power, and loan repayment rates. This is according to a 2015 study by the Brookings Institution. CSU also has the second lowest average student loan debt among four-year Ohio public universities, according to a report issued in August 2016 by LendEDU.com.

Board members thanked the President for the information, noting that the data conveys a very compelling story which may assist to further engage the business community through internships, co-ops, and philanthropic support. President Berkman noted that this presentation will be fine-tuned to provide a holistic overview, including additional information on historical context.

Provost Zhu made a presentation on Financial Challenges in the Academic Sector (Attachment M), noting decreased state funding and increased expectations that require additional resources. Dr. Zhu reported that CSU's academic sector plays a significant role in the national recognition that CSU has received. These include the AASCU Award selection as a finalist for the APLU award (increasing retention and graduation rates), the ranking in percentage of growth of total research and federal research expenditures, and the Carnegie designation for Community Engagement. Dr. Zhu ended his presentation by noting that one issue of current concern is faculty development; CSU currently relies more heavily on part-time faculty than its peers and competitors in the region.

Due to lack of time, the following agenda items were held for discussion at a later meeting: Investing in Faculty/Evaluation of Instruction, Reducing Textbook Costs, Update on Co-op/Internship Initiatives; Housing, Parking, Libraries; Student Financial Aid, and Revenue Mix and Funding Capital Projects.
